And other late ENGLISH PAPERS.

(BY PARTICULAR DESIRE)

To the Printer of the PUBLIC ADVERTISER.

SIR,

MONEY and Patriotism are properties which very seldom subsist together: The increase of the one generally brings on the decay of the other. When our fortune is increasing around us, and we feel all the comforts of the good things of this world, we are inclined to think all matters go on mighty well, and wonder exceedingly what it is people would be at: Whereas, when our own wants pinch us, we are mighty apt to think of the public distress, and that our country must be undone, because we are.

I was led into these reflections by reading a South-Carolina Gazette the other day, where, immediately after a long and most furiously patriotic epistle, signed with the letters C. G. I found an advertisement for the sale of sundry lots of lands, the property of a gentleman, the initial letters of whose name are C. G. and a little lower I met with a notification from another Zealot in the American cause, of his intention to dispose of certain of his plantations, as he found he had too many to attend, together with the affairs of his country.

The Printer of that Gazette seems to be a man of some humour; for he frequently cuts his jokes upon his brother patriots; and, like you, Mr. Woodfall, who invite us in the first page of your paper to a variety of amusements, and in the last, slily hint the consequences, by holding forth remedies for the probable effect of making connections at such places. So Mr. Timothy, when he has given a pompous account of all the self-denying resolutions in the front of his paper, sneeringly intreats his country-born customers, to be particularly careful of their RAGGS covertly, but perhaps truly insinuating, that they are like to have nothing else to cover them with, if they abide by their resolutions 'till they can be furnished with manufactures of their own. There appears however, no great probability of a general adherence to these resolutions. A list is given of a large number of the most respectable inhabitants in Charles-Town, who have absolutely refused to sign them; and one considerable importer, who says he has already signed five different sets of resolutions (so often have they varied them) declares in print, that he will sign no more; and that as a fifth and seventh set are now handing about, he shall consider himself as discharged from his former agreement.

The state of this business, together with the folly of it, are so ably represented in a letter, which I find signed by the respectable name of William Wragg, a gentleman to whom the office of Chief-Justice for that province was lately tendered, in deference to his talents and merit, but by him declined, that I shall beg of you, Mr. Woodfall, to reprint it, for the information of the good people of England. OLD MENTOR.

[Here followed the Letter at full Length.]

To the Printer of the PUBLIC ADVERTISER.

SIR,

THE private letters from Charles-Town, mentioned in your paper of To-day, have deceived you. Be assured that there are only one and thirty persons, except the officers of the crown, who have refused signing the resolutions not to import British Goods. These cannot be called a great number in such a province as South-Carolina. As little truth is there in that part of your paragraph which calls this great number the principal inhabitants of that province; you may depend on my intelligence being good, it is received from a person lately arrived from America, who is well acquainted with most of the non-subscribers. These friends to liberty and lovers of their country; whose names will be handed down to posterity with such applause, consist of but three or four Planters of any property, the rest are, with very few exceptions, little Scotch shop-keepers of no consequence. The leader is a person of acknowledged abilities Sorry am I that they have been ill-employed. The talents with which nature has favoured him, instead of being shewn in support of the rights of his country, have been always exerted against them. His behaviour at the time of the stamp-act, his advice to a certain Governor, now a Commissioner of the Customs, who attempted an infringement on the most valuable privileges of the Assembly, that of their being sole and absolute judges of the legality of the returns of their own members, with many other instances that could be produced, sufficiently evince the truth of what I have advanced; I have it from good authority, and really believe, that he never voted seriously in any question wherein the good of the people was put in opposition to oppression and arbitrary measures, but in favour of the latter. He has been known to vote contrary to his opinion, and to acknowledge that he thought his appearance in favour of the question, would have caused it to be rejected;—so conscious is this gentleman of his own principles, and of the sentiments his countrymen entertain of him. Such is the chief of this factious Junto of Non-subscribers. There are only two persons of any consequence besides, one a Dupe to Horse-Races; a Beau with more Tinsel on his cloaths than Brains in his head; a servile imitator of the above chief, with all the bad part of him, his principles without any of his understanding. This gentleman's chief objection to the non-importing agreement, is that it will be some time before the manufacture of Gold Lace will be brought to any perfection in America. The other is a very heterogeneous composition, altho' he is but half British, his Northern education has so deeply fixed his principles, that there are no traces of the generous American spirit to be seen in him.

He has exhibited himself to the world, in the capacity of a Doctor, a Soldier, and a Planter. As he is so good at assuming characters, I would recommend it to him to try that of a Friend to his Country, and can venture to assure him, that he will find more real happiness in it than he has ever enjoyed; I mean such as proceeds from the "Mens sibi conscia recti." I have, Mr. Printer, often heard of your impartiality; let me experience it. As I am induced to trouble you with this, by no other motive than that of an ardent Love of Liberty and Truth, I have adopted the respectable signature of Birchin-Lane, Dec. 8th, 1769. EPAMINONDAS.

CONCLUSION of Mr. E. Burke's celebrated SPEECH.

"WHEN the eyes of all Europe were on us this day, expecting to have those grievances mentioned, that have so long engaged their conversation, as well as our feelings—

Englishmen submitted to unheard of grievances, waiting for this hour of redress, how are we disappointed! how are we mortified! When, instead of being looked upon as persons capable of redressing public grievances, or guardians of the liberties of our electors, we are only recommended to suppress the infection now raging amongst the horned cattle, as if the members of this hon. H—se only possessed the qualification of Cow Doctors!

"How shall we account for this strange procedure? Cannot we plainly perceive, that this is the echo of a feeble, daring, venal A————n? who, grown practiced in corruption, have fitted themselves for the worst of purposes—who have been so hackneyed in the ways of error and venality, that they have lost sight of either virtue or honour, and are reduced to this last alternative, an impudent perseverance."

LONDON, FEBRUARY 10.

IT Has been said in one place, that the late vindictive measures against Mr. Wilkes and the freeholders of Great-Britain, were concerted in a cabinet council; and in another place, the contrary has been affirmed. Both these assertions may be true, which to the public may seem a paradox; but the mystery is easily unfolded. The cabinet council nominally consists of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord President, the First Lord of the Treasury, the Lord Privy Seal, the Secretaries of State, the Commander in Chief, and the First Lord of the Admiralty. The persons who held these offices, at the time alluded to (viz. last winter) were Lord Camden, Earl Gower, the Duke of Grafton, Earl of Bristol, Earl of Rochford, Viscount Weymouth, Earl of Hillsborough, Marquis of Granby, and Sir Edward Hawke. It may therefore be true, that the expulsion of Mr. Wilkes, and the election of Mr. Luttrell, were not concerted in this council: But let us consider of whom the cabinet-council really consists. First, there is the Right Hon. JAMES-STUART MACKENZIE, the brother, and the locum tenens of the Earl of Bute. The next is Sir GILBERT ELIOT, Bart. another Scot, who has many good places; he is the private friend and confident of the Earl of Bute. The third is CHARLES JENKINSON, Esq; a Lord of the Treasury, and Auditor of Accounts to the Princess Dowager of Wales. He was Lord Bute's principal Secretary, when his Lordship was publicly at the head of the Treasury. The fourth is SAMUEL MARTIN, Esq; who b———d the Duke of Newcastle, and attempted to k— Mr. Wilkes. He is Treasurer to the Princess Dowager of Wales; and was another of Lord Bute's Secretaries. The fifth is Lord NORTH; who was strongly recommended to, and forced into the Exchequer (upon the death of the late Mr. Cha. Townshend) by the irresistable weight and influence of CARLTON HOUSE. Will any body doubt, that these men, under such patronage, would hesitate a moment about concerting and executing any measures? It may therefore be true, that the late violent measures, and some others equally vindictive, which are now carrying on, were all concerted in a cabinet-council. While these clerks continue in their present stations, and a set of second-rate men can be found, to take upon them responsible offices, the present corrupt and wicked manner of conducting the public business, and determined malice against the liberties of Englishmen, will not cease. It is owing to a resolution to keep these underlings and spies in office (for they are nothing else) that every honest man of abilities is afraid to enter into administration. A resolution that tends to forward that plan, which has been for a long time carried on, for lowering all the constitutional powers of that kingdom.

An ADECDOTE respecting Junius and the Earl of D—e.

JUNIUS, in his last letter addressed to the ———— observes, that "the natives of SCOTLAND, while they are not in actual rebellion, are intitled to protection:" when lo! Credite Posteri! a Scotch Earl is instantly appointed to the chief command of a great American colony, whose father only was in actual rebellion. He indeed was taken, in arms, in 1745, but through the mercy of a humane Sovereign, was not executed; he was only confined to the limits of a large city, the city of Lincoln; and even there too, was permitted, with the leave of the mayor and corporation, to extend his liberty to some few miles further. His Lordship seldom requested this last indulgence except on a visit, now and then, to the well-known loyalty or Sir F——— D———, at Nocton, about six miles from the place of his parole. He lies buried in the cathedral of Lincoln. His son is appointed GOVERNOR of New-York.

Happy stroke of refined policy! How must the Americans rejoice in hearing such Governors fixed upon, to encrease and strengthen their allegiance to King George!

The Earl of Errol, son of Lord Kilmarnock, is since elected one of the Sixteen Peers for Scotland. Well might Junius say, a bigotted understanding can draw proofs of attachment to the House of H————r, from a notorious zeal for the House of STUART, and find an earnest of future loyalty in former rebellions.

SIR,

WHEN I reflect on the alarming situation of your affairs both at home and abroad—When, instead of harkening to the just complaints of your loyal and affectionate people, and exerting that right which the constitution has invested in you alone, to redress their grievances—When, instead of lending a gracious ear to the cries of above an hundred thousand of your best, your truest friends, you have been prevailed upon by the advice of a few wicked and abandoned M————s to treat them with silent contempt—When, on the other hand, I see an address, surreptitiously obtained from an insignificant, beggarly borough, (and presented to the P—— of W———, by a needy and an abandoned individual, who scandalously imposed on his youth and simplicity) meet with a cordial reception—And when I consider that you are now deserted by almost every one of your honest servants, and left to the guidance and direction of men, totally void of every public virtue, and with whom no good man will be connected; I tremble at the consequence!

Nor are these evils, great and many as they are, confined within the limits of this K——m. The contagion has spread to the remotest corner of your D———ns. Ire—d exhibits a scene of confusion and uproar—All Am———a, to a man, (your own servants excepted) groan under the intolerable pressure of complicated grievances. Do you complain, Sir, that they are refractory to the authority of G————t? It is because they are unjustly deprived of their CHARTERED PRIVILEGES, and forcibly dragooned into a compliance with laws, framed in an assembly where they are not represented.

Restore them to their primitive, their undoubted immunities—Place men of virtue at the helm of G————t, and fidelity, prompt obedience, and unshaken loyalty, will, on their part, be the certain consequence. They are a frugal and modest People, and the more sober and temperate their manners, the stronger is the presumption, that when they remonstrate their grievances, they do it with sufficient provocation.

To such a melancholly situation is your G————t at home reduced!—The constitution is so enfeebled by various unjust and arbitrary measures, adopted by a corrupt a———n—Discontent and murmurings so universally prevail among all ranks of the community, that were your M————rs as honest and as able as they are the reverse, your own happiness, as well as that of your faithful s—j—ts, demands an immediate compliance with their just requests. They know their own wants, and they must be satisfied—From them you hear the voice of truth—To them you owe your C——n—By them you are supported—By their consent, you and your predecessors mounted the T——, and without their consent, you • • • • • • • • • • • • •.

MEANWELL.

CHARLES-TOWN, APRIL 5.

We are informed, that a great number of Horse-Thieves and other Banditti, who fled from the back parts of this and the neighbouring provinces, quite to West-Florida, while the regulating scheme prevailed, after having sold the horses they rode off, are returned, and returning, in small parties, by sea, to different sea-ports on this continent, perhaps to play their old game over again: But they will be narrowly watched, and 'tis not very unlikely, that some of those gentry may furnish the first business for our new Circuit-Courts.

On Sunday last arrived here, in 60 days from Falmouth, with his Majesty's mails, the Le Despencer Packet-boat, commanded by Captain William Talbott.

In the Ship Minerva, Capt. Hugh Rose, for London, which sailed from Beaufort the middle of last month, was shipped upwards of 70,000 lb weight of Indico, which made her the richest vessel that ever sailed from any out-port in this province.

In the course of last month 8 ships, 2 snows, 9 brigantines, 14 scooners, 7 sloops, and one ship of war, have arrived here; in all 41 sail. In the same time have departed this port, 13 ships, 4 snows, 14 brigantines, 10 scooners, 13 sloops, and two packet-boats; in all 56 sail.

Last Monday died, aged 88 years, Mrs. Mary Feauchereaud, relict of Mr. Gideon Feauchereaud, deceased; who could read the smallest print, without the help of spectacles, and has left a brother and a sister, whose ages together make 145 years.
